

Bio-sketch of Professor Joseph Albert TRAPANI

Dr Joseph Trapani is currently the Deputy Director of Research and Head of the Cancer Immunology Program at Peter MacCallum Cancer Centre in Melbourne. He holds positions of Professor, Department of Microbiology and Immunology, University of Melbourne; Senior Research Fellow of the NHMRC; Associate, Department of Pathology, University of Melbourne; Senior Associate, Department of Surgery, Austin & Repatriation Medical Centre, University of Melbourne.

Joseph was born in Melbourne, Australia 1954. After undergraduate studies at the University of Melbourne, he went on to complete his PhD studies also at The University of Melbourne. At this time he was awarded the Fellowship of The Royal Australasian College of Physicians and appointed as a Research Fellow at the Laboratory of Human Immunogenetics, Division of Immunology, Sloan-Kettering Cancer Institute, New York.

His previous appointments are numerous as is his awards, fellowships prizes and lectureships. Professor Trapani is married to Dr Vivien Sutton and they have two children. He speaks Italian, Maltese, French and English.
